SINGULAR SOFTWARE ANNOUNCES PUBLIC BETA FOR NEXT RELEASE OF PLURALEYES FOR FINAL CUT PRO

PluralEyes 1.2 Public Beta now available; new release enhances auto rendering and grants write access to new media types

Vancouver, British Columbia – April 8, 2010 – Singular Software, developer of automation applications for post-production, is pleased to announce the public beta PluralEyes version 1.2 for Apple Final Cut Pro®. Designed for time-conscious video professionals, PluralEyes offers critical workflow automation tools for analyzing media content and synchronizing audio and video clips, including stunning DSLR camera images. The public beta carries the first round of a series of imminent product enhancements leading up to full version announcement late next month.

The new version will include improved workflow for dual-system audio, clock drift correction, increased synchronization control, broader coverage of media types and more. It does not overwrite the previously installed PluralEyes 1.1, and can run alongside that version. About PluralEyes

The PluralEyes application dramatically accelerates the workflow for multi-camera, multi-take and dual-system audio productions. By analyzing audio information, PluralEyes synchronizes audio and video clips automatically, without the need for timecode, clappers or other manual preparation. Optimized for fast performance on both Mac and PC platforms, PluralEyes supports both Vegas Pro® and Final Cut Pro.

Availability and Pricing of PluralEyes

PluralEyes for Final Cut Pro is available to purchase for $149 USD via the Singular Software website: <http://www.singularsoftware.com>.

Final Cut Pro users can also sample PluralEyes by downloading a fully functional 30-day free trial version from: <http://www.singularsoftware.com/downloads.html>.
